Rain or shine, our farmers are always hard at work. Working with the land requires careful planning, commitment, and dedication. We are so thankful for our dedicated team members who are incredibly committed to our plants and animals!

With August just around the corner, we're reminiscing about last year's family friendly activities during Open Farm Week. We have another fun week planned for Open Farm Week August 9th-15th, including workshops, family activities, live music, happy hours, great food, and tours. Find out about all our events programming on our website, on our Facebook page, and in our ad in the Charlotte News.

Nothing quite compares to the sweeping view of the Valley Field from the Brick House, the historic farmhouse at Philo Ridge. Speaking of farmhouses, Frost Beer Works will be serving their Farmhouse Ale, as well as Lush and Ponyboy today from 4-8 PM! Come cool off with a cold one and take in the view!

Look closely... can you spot the bee hovering amidst these flowers? Our Ridge Garden's perennial zones provide excellent habitats for pollinators like this bee, who spread pollen and help plants reproduce. Nearly 30% of the world's food crops depend on pollinators for reproduction, which is why it is so critical to preserve pollinator habitats. Besides, they're beautiful! Learn more on today's free farm tour at 4 PM.

We are truly honored to be a partner member of Rural Vermont and have the opportunity to host their annual fundraising dinner. It was a special night with delicious food from the farm, drinks from Eden Cider and Fluid Bar Service, and storytelling from Bruce Hennessy of Maple Wind Farm, Corie Pierce of Bread and Butter Farm, and our very own Mike Kirk and Jane Engelman. We look forward to collaborating with this incredible organization in the future! Thank you Rural Vermont for everything you do for our rural communities statewide!

Pickle me this! Dilly beans, bread and butter spears, and beets add some jewel tones to our cold case - not to mention kicking flavor. We also feature drinks and products from producers like Savouré, Sap!, Shelburne Farms, and Vermont Creamery - we are lucky to be surrounded by such quality producers in our Brave Little State!

Our farm compost steaming in today's frigid temps. "Pack," our thickly compacted cow manure, hay, and mulch from the pack barn, organic material, and food waste from the kitchen and market are some of the contributing elements to this rich material. It will be spread on our pastures to help improve our soil quality - which will in turn improve our pasture, our plants and our animals' health, and the health of the consumer.
