*We're talking treehouses for grown-ups at the Cotswold adventureland The Fish

Story by Sophie Clark

The treetop hideaways include underfloor heating and ensuite bathrooms

Nestled on the hillsides of the Cotswolds and spread over 400 acres of sublime scenery, you'll discover a countryside estate like no other. Part boutique hotel, part adventure hideout, The Fish Hotel is a collection of village-style houses, huts and hideaways offering a back-to-nature sanctuary with a touch of luxury. For those seeking escape from the daily grind of city living you'll be spoilt for choice with this countryside playground.

The vast range of accommodation at The Fish means you can always find the right balance of cosy hidden corners mixed with contemporary Scandinavian design to suit your personal relaxation requirements.

If you're looking for something with rustic charm, the Hillside Huts offer a truly private experience. Complete with bedroom, lounge area and ensuite bathroom, these quaint dwellings offer a unique, secluded stay where you can bathe in outdoor hot tubs, watch the sunset in complete seclusions and in one of them (Boaty McBoatface) you can even row across your own lake to a private island and soak up the stillness of this rural idyll.

Perhaps the true embodiment of The Fish's youthful and adventurous ethos is a stay at one of its Treehouses, a 50 sq m space that presents an alternative to the traditional hotel getaway. Each Treehouse is set on stilts in its own private woodland setting - and inside the Treehouse you'll feel at home with an open-plan design, where modern interiors meets natural materials while outside you can dine with a view under a towering oak tree - discovering your inner child has never been so stylish.

But take note, The Fish is also home to Hook, a vision of two-Michelin starred chef Martin Burge. Its menu includes signature dishes such as Porthilly rock oysters, poached blue chip salmon, whole baked seabass and lobster thermidor, which can happily be enjoyed on the terrace for alfresco dining in the summer months.

From cosy traditional rooms or grown-up treehouses to woodland walks, intimate film screenings and fine dining there is plenty to explore at The Fish. This is a rural retreat that is easy on the eye and soothing for the soul.
