Humidity is one of the core tenets of cannabis seed germination, so it's crucial your germination setup doesn't dry. There are two main reasons the humidity may be too low. First, it could be too low. Second, there may not be enough moisture in the solution: Water well and keep the ambient temperature warm enough (at least 21°C) <https://myopportunity.com/profile/yielding-strains/nw>

Seeds (1), (3), and (5) are female. They should be used.

Seeds (2) and (4) are not female. They should be discarded.

When selecting female seeds, use only those seeds that have a perfectly round volcano-like depression at the bottom, (where the seed was attached to the plant). This depression is shown in seeds (1), (3) and (5)

Anything short of this, as shown in seeds (2) and (4), should not be used. They may be males or morphodites. Be very selective. It is typical to have only one in ten seeds meet this standard. The size or colour has no bearing on the sex. This method is 100% accurate.

Male and morphodite seeds are filled in, ragged or not uniform, sometimes protruding up. Male seeds are generally lopsided, like an American football. Male seeds will “thump-thump” like a flat tyre when rolled across the table. Female seeds are nearly round and roll easily. A magnifying glass and a pair of tweezers is very helpful when handling seeds to determine

Another factor that will affect the price of weed seeds is the THC levels of the strain you are. In fact, the THC content level directly correlates to the price; the more THC the strain has, the higher the cost of the seeds will. THC-rich seeds generally sell for triple the cost of their low quality, low THC
