#LIFEWITHDOGS

THE CANINE COMMUNITY

Households with dogs are more than 57 million strong in the United States, and there are tens of millions more around the globe. More of us are welcoming dogs into our families every day. We invest our time and money in their happiness, and in ours.

And that sense of well-being we get when we bond with our dogs? Science says it's more than just good vibes: "When we cuddle, play with, and even just look at our dogs we get a hefty boost of oxytocin, our body's naturally occurring feel-good, stress-relieving, emotional-bonding hormone. So do our pets." Time Magazine (October, 2012)

IL CAPRICCIO

HOW DO YOU SAY DELIZIOSO IN DOG?

In the heart of Los Feliz Village, you can live out your Lady and the Tramp fantasy. Bring your OkCupid date here to share a plate of Napoli pasta while your dog gazes up lovingly from beneath the table. il Capriccio will provide the delicious fare and set the Instagram-worthy scene.

Most places simply allow dogs on their patios for brunch, but il

Capriccio takes the cake on dog friendliness for dinner. Bring your dog any day of the week...especially on the authentic Italian eatery's Pooch Saturdays. In the event your OkCupid date stands you up, you can count on il Capriccio to welcome your dog as substitute—we won't judge if you decide to sit across from him for the full-blown doggy date you're not ashamed to have. There are no ground-only rules and water bowls are provided. Still hoping that OkCupid date pulls through next time? Post your best pic on Instagram with the hashtag #ilCapriccioLA, and you might win a free dinner.

Inherently, this place has a romantic atmosphere—close and snugly fit tables, complete with simple decor, dim lights, and iron fixtures. As you may have already guessed, this is the place for indulgent carb-loading. Let loose and enjoy everything il Capriccio has to offer, from the fresh bread (served with pesto instead of the usual balsamic), satisfyingly large portions of fresh pasta, and classic favorites like squid ink, ravioli, and wines from around the boot-shaped country.

Insider tip: check in on Yelp for a free dessert. Tiramisu always tastes better when it's on the house.

An aerial photograph of Central Park in New York City, showing the lush green park area surrounded by a dense urban landscape of skyscrapers. The park is the central focus, with its characteristic rectangular shape and various green spaces, including a large lake and several smaller ponds. The surrounding city is a mix of high-rise buildings and lower-rise structures, creating a stark contrast with the natural environment of the park.

DOGS BELONG ANYWHERE

The history of d.b.a. is now over 20 years, and despite the introduction of Google search and Wikipedia, there always seems to be a discussion about what “d.b.a.” actually stands for. We all assumed and had overheard it was “doing business as,” but since we’re talking about dog friendly locations, we’ll just pretend it means “dogs belong anywhere.”

Though what d.b.a. really stands for is beer, and an unbelievably good beer selection at that, including cask beer—which is becoming an increasing favorite with beer lovers, but remains underappreciated by the masses. You know who we’re talking about: those people who shout “Bud Light!” as soon as they get a sliver of attention from a bartender.

The scotch here is aplenty as well, and you’re sure to look really cool when you bring your out-of-town friends to this place so they can see what a real “local” bar is like (we won’t judge you if you walk away when they ask if there are t-shirts for purchase).

So, we have amazing beer, we have a scotch selection to put most scotch bars to shame, and we even have a nice selection of tequila. What are we missing? Oh yes, your four-legged buddy who, if he or she could talk, would totally let the cat out of the bag that you were checking out the Wikipedia page on scotch.

Space is at a premium in this city, but d.b.a. has one of the best covered patios around. Your dog is encouraged to come with you, and based on all the selfies that people post on Foursquare, your best friend will end up making a few friends as well.

PICCINO COFFEE BAR

FOR THE FOGGY MORNING DOGPATCH DOG

Just when you thought San Francisco couldn't get any more dog friendly, you stumble into Dogpatch. This up-and-coming neighborhood is chock-full of vibrant urban charm, hipsteresque hangout spots, and dog friendly vibes. And if there's one thing urbanites love, it's good coffee (right?).

Luckily, Dogpatch has that covered.

Centrally located among traditional San Francisco-style homes, industrial warehouses, and local merchants and artisans, rests a happy yellow horse-stable-turned-coffee-bar. The smell of locally roasted coffee and fresh baked pastries wafts through the air as you stroll closer. An eclectic group of locals congregate outside, some exchanging small talk while others hurry off to begin their day, caffeine in hand. Either way, the strong sense of community (and coffee aroma) draws you in.

Fido can hang outside by the water bowl and make some new friends while you order—just don't forget to grab a freshly baked dog biscuit (or two) while you're inside. Don't let the line deter you; the baristas here are quick. Before you know it, you'll be reunited with your four-legged friend outside, coffee (and biscuits) in hand.

After you grab your double-extra-foam-almond-milk-latte (or straight espresso...whichever makes your coffee loving heart flutter), wander down Minnesota Street about a block and you'll end up smack dab at the entrance to Esprit Park. Here, your dog can romp off-leash with his friends while you nibble on Piccino housemade granola.

CHICAGO

WE ARE NOT A CONTENT
AGGREGATOR HERE TO

FRIENDLY LOCATION

THE ANTHEM

THE ANTHEM HERE IS CHICAGO SPORTS

Among the many reasons you probably adopted a dog, a few are assumed. You wanted to imply that you are maturing as an adult, you wanted to attract someone who would love you despite the fact you're not mature...and you wanted to name your dog after your favorite athlete because that's what you do if you (actually) love sports. Chicago has always been a great sports town. Strangers at the bar, engaging in conversation about last night's score or tonight's game, with the knowledge of a real fan...not like your friend Tim who retweets ESPN updates from two weeks ago.

At The Anthem in Chicago, you are exactly the type of person who will be welcomed with open arms. Well, unless your dog was named after an athlete of a rival team from another city and you can't explain that story in under :30 seconds. This bar is consistently named best sports bar in Chicago. So don't just take our word for it, others long before us agree.

Sister bar to Bangers & Lace, but completely different vibe. You're not here for the craft beer, even though they have some. You're here for the rooting, the chanting, the chicken wings, and rounds of Schlitz for everyone in your crew.

With an open patio for your best friend to hang, water bowls, and dog lovers abound, you're likely to meet your next

just remember that.
