INT. COFFEE SHOP - DAY

Two women ANGIE (20's) and LISA (20's) converse over dessert.

Lisa scribbles into her notebook: "Success is..."

She scratches it.

ANGIE

Maybe you can interview Heather from high school. Do you remember her?

LISA

Who doesn't remember Heather.

ANGIE

I heard she owns a multi-million dollar business now. Talk about successful.

Angie pulls out her phone. Opens Heather's SOCIAL MEDIA PAGE and scrolls through several pictures.

ANGIE (CONT'D)

I mean look at her house and that pool?

Lisa glances at the photos.

LISA

Nice.

ANGIE

Or there's Cameron. I'm sure you've heard he plays pro ball. And he has like 4 million followers.

LISA

Maybe.

ANGIE

Those are the only successful people I know from these parts.

Lisa sighs, stressed.

ANGIE (CONT'D)

I'm sure you'll find someone good to interview.

EXT. PARK - DAY

Lisa sits at a park bench over-looking a grassy field.

On her phone, she scrolls through Heather's page.

She drafts a message to Heather reading: "Hey, I wanted to see if I could interview you for a community spotlight article I'm writing for the paper"--

THE SCREEN GOES BLACK . Heather's phone dies. She sighs, unpleased. Sets it down.

With nothing else to do, Heather is forced to LOOK UP. She scans the park, finally notices -- THE PEOPLE IN HER COMMUNITY.

BEGIN MONTAGE:

-- A COUPLE, celebrate their BABY'S first steps.

-- A FATHER (30's) teaches his SON how to throw.

-- An ELDERLY WOMAN (60's) jogs impressively across the path.

-- A MAN (20's) returns a dropped PHONE to a TEEN.

Lisa watches them one by one. Her smile grows, beaming on a thought.

She pulls out her notebook and writes: "Success is not one size fits all.

LISA (V.O.)

It isn't measured by the size of your property, your salary, or the amount of followers you have.

LISA (V.O.)

It's in the little things most often overlooked. It's as individual as a fingerprint.

Lisa gets up, approaches the Couple and their Baby.

LISA (V.O.)

It is in learning, in teaching, in growing, in adapting, in making a difference. It is everywhere.

She interviews them happily, jotting down notes.
