Thievery Corporation Essentials

Apple Music Electronic

With their slick musicianship and seamless fusion of global sounds, this American duo reached an audience far outside the electronic music underground. Early albums like 1997's Sounds From the Thievery Hi-Fi and 2000's The Mirror Conspiracy gelled perfectly with the emerging downtempo sound, combining trip-hop beats, reggae bass, and bits of jazz. Despite their immediate success with the chill-out crowd, Thievery Corporation's music got darker and more psychedelic as the decade went on, winning them rock fans and collaborators like Wayne Coyne and David Byrne.

Born James Chambers, he brought reggae to the world as the star and soundtrack composer of the 1972 film The Harder They Come. Cliff got his start as a hungry young rude boy during the '60s heyday of ska and rocksteady, but it was his sweet reggae songs, with their mix of fatalism and hopefulness, that made him an international force to be reckoned with. His honey-dripping voice has taken him everywhere from background vocals with The Rolling Stones to a spot on The Lion King soundtrack, and he was inducted into The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2010.

NEEDTOBREATHE Essentials

Apple Music Rock

NEEDTOBREATHE are one of Christian rock's most inventive acts, thanks to a sound that matches deep personal inspiration to 21st-century indie flair. Their songs unfold like tapestries of rootsy twang, gently plucked mandolins, and alt-rock guitars. On 2014's Rivers in the Wasteland, they subtly add synth-shaded pop hooks to their eclectic mix. Graced with husky pipes, singer Bear Rinehart regularly makes his faith explicit—yet as the ecstatic “Let Us Love” shows, he also transforms questions of salvation into universal pleas for peace and understanding.
